

LOVED BRUTALITY, GAVE 'GENTLEMAN' HUSBAND DIVORCE

Mrs. Folsom in Letter Confessed Infatuation for Rough Ranchman.

"MY MATE," SHE WROTE.

Epistle Wins Lawyer's Freedom, Though Wife Had Sought Hers at Reno.

The statement, "You were too much of a gentleman. Brutality is necessary for my control. This man has it," is the motif of a letter Mrs. Florence Folsom, wife of Charles Dwight Folsom, a New York lawyer, wrote her husband from Reno, Nev. The man she calls "brutal" is A. G. Williams, a ranchman.

Mr. Folsom, who has an office at No. 55 John street and lives at Great Neck, N. J., has filed the letter in the Supreme Court and on it Justice Giegele has granted him a divorce.

The remarkable document, dated "Feb. 25, dawn," was identified by Mrs. Georgianna Bluzome, Mrs. Folsom's mother, who lives at No. 68 West one Hundred and Fortieth street, as in her daughter's handwriting. Mrs. Folsom went to Reno to sue for divorce, as she and her husband were not happy together. She took with her Charles, their fifteen-year-old son.

After writing the letter she disappeared from Reno and has wandered about in the West and in Canada since.

By a peculiar coincidence, on the day the husband's divorce suit was heard in New York she was discovered under an assumed name in a hospital at Chico, a small town in northern California.

CONFESSED LOVE FOR MAN WHO RULED HER.

This is her letter of confession, in part:

"Dear Dwight—I am stronger now and able to write you the full truth, and before God I mean to do it. The situation in Reno, of your family, of Charles and myself is terrible, tragic and frightful, as can be well imagined.

"I am writing this letter because I love you, because I once loved you and because I love you, Williams. He has treated me with crushing brutality. He has also treated me with the utmost kindness. Both are possible to him.

"You will hear him described as worthless, a liar, a rascal. He is wicked in many ways, which I am not writing to you because I love you and because I love you, Williams. He has treated me with crushing brutality. He has also treated me with the utmost kindness. Both are possible to him.

"You will hear him described as worthless, a liar, a rascal. He is wicked in many ways, which I am not writing to you because I love you and because I love you, Williams. He has treated me with crushing brutality. He has also treated me with the utmost kindness. Both are possible to him.

"HE IS ONE HUMAN BEING WHO CAN CONTROL ME."

"You would consider him coarse and illiterate. He is that. He cannot write intelligibly. One of the cruel things—unconsciously cruel, I see now—was to make me write an affectionate letter to him to induce him to do what I wanted. He is a man in whom good and evil are strangely blended. I loved him in every way. I never loved you one-tenth as well nor any other. He is my natural mate.

"I have suffered hell at his hands, but I shall say no further ill of him. The cruelty he has inflicted was mostly unconscious, and he had nursed me like a mother many a night, tears rolling down his cheeks because of my pain. I never meant to be his mistress. I meant only to be his friend.

"My mental incapacity, worldly ignorance and my folly and helplessness generally appeal to the best in him. His wife is a strong, able woman, well able to take care of herself. He is to be divorced very soon.

"I can make no excuse for my conduct except that I am a very strange being, not like other people. I am not crazy, but very strange. I sincerely and earnestly believe he is the one human being who can control me. As long as I shall have to endure rough language and usage—but I shall be happier than you made me, for Williams is a being of my own kind and species. You are not. May you find your mate and with less pain than I paid to find mine."

DESCRIPTION.

These two distinctive blouses for the tailored suit cleverly adhere to one of the most popular effects of the moment—that of the waistcoat.

The blouse on the left figure is made of chiffon or crepe de chine, either in a color to match the suit or contrasting, as one might desire. The sleeves are in one with the waist and are gathered slightly into deep cuffs, which are trimmed up the back with velvet buttons. Material to match the skirt is used for a shaped belt reaching to each side of the front, where it cuts away in points, giving a waistcoat effect. In the one with the belt are the straps, which continue around the neck and seem to support it in true suspender style. This masculine severity, however, is relieved by the dainty lace trim outlining the neck of the waist. And to complete the belt in front a slash of satin is drawn through slits in the points and let to drop low in back, where it ties in a knot and ends.

This slash arrangement would add charmingly to the otherwise plain effect of a tailored suit, and with a cut-away coat the crush of silk, which may be of plaid, Roman or plain color to match, would give the newest effect showing below the opening in front. I might suggest that a last year's suit with a plain skirt would immediately assume an up-to-date appearance with a blouse and trimmings such as these. If none of the skirt material is to be had, velvet to match in color may be used as belt and straps, with a blouse of self-color chiffon cloth, or one of a pale color that harmonizes.

The blouse at the right achieves the waistcoat effect in quite a different manner; a chemise of chiffon cloth in a blouse of soft satin or crepe de chine is buttoned down the center front with tiny glass buttons. This closing is continued below the belt line, cutting away in points to give a waistcoat effect to the tiny points. This may be finished on the edge with a cording or a line of buttonhole braiding, which will give a little weight to it, and lying over a skirt of cloth or velvet it is very pretty and effective. The fashionable touch of fur is used at the neck as a collar reaching to where the chemise ends, while the three-quarter-length sleeves are finished simply with a cording.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Dear Fashion Editor:

Please suggest a way to make an evening gown of Nile green broadcloth or sermese. I would like to have a lamp shade effect. Kindly suggest what kind of trimming would match. I don't care for shades of face. Am a blonde, rather short and not very stout. Am twenty years of age and five feet tall.

L.E.A.

Use self color chiffon cloth for the lamp shade tunic, edged with narrow brown fur, and wired to stand out. Make the bodice of chiffon cloth, the neck finished with ruffles and the sleeves with fur. A wide belt of the broadcloth with a cluster of pink roses at the front would complete the gown. The foundation chemise skirt could be opened in the front, with rounded corners, and draped from under the tunic.

Dear Fashion Editor:

I have four yards of taupe oronocord poplin and wish to make a simple little afternoon dress. Would very much appreciate a hint from you as to what I could combine it with to give a little color. Am forty years old, dark hair and eyes, no color and quite slim.

MRS. J. M.

A touch of lively rose color would be pretty as a small vest part or reverse-shape pieces in a chemise of self color chiffon. A small puff of the chiffon at the elbow could have a slash bow of the rose velvet on the back of the cording which finishes it. Make the skirt draped from the front and back of the belt in peg top style. A belt of self color velvet would look well, while a soft square collar of chiffon cloth hemstitched in rose would be pretty finishing the neck.

GIRLS FIND BODY IN WOODS.

Man Had Hanged Himself Long Ago and Rope Had Broken.

The body of a man who had hanged himself to a tree so long ago that the rope had rotted and broken was found in the woods on Garret Mountain, near a reservoir at Little Falls, N. J., yesterday afternoon, by some small girls. They ran to the home of Justice of the Peace Morris Kamelhorst at Little Falls and told him.

Detective Drew of the County Prosecutor's office looked at the body. He said the man was apparently a German of middle age and in poor circumstances.

Undertaker McBrier of Paterson was sent to get the body, but got lost with his wagon in the woods and abandoned the effort. Detective Drew will guide him to the body to-day.

PLEA FOR RUSSIAN EXILES.

European Notables Join in Move to Aid Them.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The sufferings from hunger, disease and ill-treatment of Russian political prisoners and exiles are set forth in an appeal in their behalf published in many European newspapers to-day over the signatures of several hundred prominent men and women of Germany, England, France and other countries.

An epidemic of suicide is said to prevail among the banished political offenders who, it is stated in the appeal, regard this as their only means of salvation. The signatures of the appeal purpose forming a committee to collect and publish the facts.

BOY OF 13 TAPS TILL; MA CALLS HIM SALLY, BUT HE'S NO MILKSOP

Lad Captured as Robber After a Hard Chase Gives Police a False Address.

Beyond the fact that he says his mother calls him "Sally," the police know nothing of the identity of a boy who spent last night in the Brooklyn Children's Society shelter at No. 106 Schermerhorn street, pending his arraignment in the Children's Court this morning on a charge of robbery. When caught by Patrolman Cuff in Williamsburg after the looting of a till the youngster said:

"Huh! So you got me at last. But I fooled you. I've got away with many a job. Huh! You'll get promoted!"

The lad yesterday noon entered the florist shop of Pierre Steyion at No. 23 Broadway, opposite the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza. Several women were buying flowers. The busy proprietor turned to see the boy rifling the cash register. Steyion seized the youngster, who kicked him savagely, then punched him twice, broke away and fled.

Steyion pursued. In and out among the many cars on the plaza the boy scooted. Just as it seemed certain he would escape he ran against the railing around the Washington statue. He fell and wrenched his ankle severely. He then Cuff grabbed him.

In the Bedford avenue station no money was found on the prisoner, though Steyion said change was missing from the cash register. The boy said he was Isidor Friedman, thirteen, of No. 241 South Third street. The police found the address was fictitious.

"Huh!" said the boy when told of this, "do you think the King of the Tilt-Tappers would tell the truth?"

BEGIN DEBATE TO-DAY ON CURRENCY MEASURE

Senator Owen to Favor Revised Glass Bill in Preliminary Skirmish.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Formal debate on currency reform will open in the Senate this afternoon. Senator Owen, Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, is expected to set forth at length all possible reasons for the adoption of the Glass bill as revised by him and five other Democrats on the committee. The Glass bill as it passed the House was reported Saturday unamended.

To-morrow Senator Hitchcock, a Democratic member of the committee, who affiliated with five Republicans on still another report, will speak in support of its adoption. He will outline the opposition to the bill as approved by the President, and indicate what line will be followed by the dissenting Democrats and the Republicans in the Senate.

It is not hoped or expected that anything will be accomplished this week beyond the delivery of certain set speeches. General debate will not begin until Jan. 6, when the Senate reassembles after the Christmas holidays.

Die at the Age of 101.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Nov. 24.—Rhode Island's oldest woman, Mrs. Spencer Mowray, died here to-day, aged 101 years. Up to a few days ago she was able to read and sew. A year ago she attended the church wedding of one of her fifteen great-grandchildren.

WANAMAKER CHEERED IN SALVATION ARMY HALL

Big Merchant Calls Miss Eva Booth "Queen of Rescue Workers."

John Wanamaker and Gen. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, stood side by side today on the platform of the meeting room of the army headquarters in West Fourteenth street, and were cheered for several minutes by 1,500 officers of the army, who were gathered there in an executive meeting. The meeting was for the purpose of discussing the raising of volunteers by Gen. Booth for work in India and Japan. Mr. Wanamaker, when pressed for a speech, characterized Miss Eva Booth as "The Queen of Rescue Workers."

NOTES OF THE THEATRES.

The success of Ethel Barrymore in Haddon Chambers' play "Tante" at the Empire Theatre has determined Charles Frohman to extend her engagement till after the holidays, thus cancelling the annual holiday engagement of Maude Adams at the Empire. Miss Adams will begin her season Jan. 15 in "The Legend of Leonora" and other Barrie plays.

In New Haven Thursday night Billie Burke will make her first appearance in W. Somerset Maugham's play, "The Land of Promise." This week will witness the first rehearsal of William Collier in a new comedy written by himself in collaboration with Grant Stewart entitled "A Little Water on the Side." Rehearsals of "The Laughing Husband," Mr. Frohman's last musical production of the season, will be begun to-day.

In January H. V. Emmond and Eva Moore, who in Mrs. Emmond in private life, will sail with their company from the Criterion Theatre, London, to appear in a repertoire of their successes here. A comedy by Harrison Rhodes and Tom Wise entitled "The Prince of Showmen," with Mr. Wise in the principal role, and a Barrie fantasy called "The Little Policeman" will be subsequent Frohman productions.

A special performance of George Scarborough's melodrama "The Laure" was given in the Maxine Elliott Theatre last night for working girls. Tickets were distributed through social workers to shop girls, and the theatre was filled. Several talks on the social evil were made between acts.

Miss Adah Pavoni, a young French actress, will make her New York debut a week from to-morrow in the Haymarket Theatre in a new play by Clara Lipman and Samuel Shipman, entitled "Children of To-Day," in which Louis Mann will play the principal role.

The beauty contest to be held in connection with the production of "Oh, I Say," in the Casino Theatre has been postponed until Tuesday afternoon, December 2. It is open to all the members of the Shubert choruses.

F. P. Proctor will open the Proctor Theatre in Mount Vernon this afternoon, the new playhouse being the twenty-second on Proctor's circuit. The entire investment is said to represent almost $1,000,000.
